On NPR tonight, Bob Woodward went out of his way to deny that the judge was an adversary and to defend the lawyers, particularly the prosecutor for not bringing in information on WH and similar people. He praised the prosecutor highly, saying he was inhibited by the indictment's limitations but NOT saying that the prosecution is responsible for what was left our of the indictment. I believe this bears on my previous comment, that rather than digging and getting original information, he and Carl Bernstein were repeating what had been leaked to them. This make Silbert a likely source, as do other things, like the Baldwin story, the only other source of which could have been the FBI. Praising both the judge and the prosecutor with the records they made requires an indiscriminate mind, conscience or stomach. Or what amounts to bribery or ignorance. HW 1/31/73
